

What to Expect When You Breed to Meinse 439

Meinse's offspring inherit his quality gaits, especially his powerful walk and balanced, expressive trot. He also improves the canter. Meinse also passes on his jet black coat and friendly disposition. His sons and daughters are elegant and noble, and make excellent dressage horses. Meinse is built uphill, a characteristic he passes on to his offspring.

Offspring Characteristics

- Improves the canter
- Talent for dressage
- Long necks, adds length
- Vertical neck
- Good head-neck connection, improves it
- Good length of front legs
- Straight front legs
- Sloping shoulder
- Good in the back
- Built uphill
- Strong loins
- Croup has good length, with good slope
- Good length in pasterns
- Big feet
- Tight legs
- Excellent, very powerful walk, with good length of stride
- Powerful trot with excellent rhythm, expression and carrying power
- Lots of suppleness
- Very balanced
- Throws jet black coats
- Increases size slightly
- Modern type
- Excellent conformation

Ideal Pairing

Meinse does not add hair and is best if not paired with mares with sickle hocks. Not suitable for mares with plain heads.